Theme: Arise and shine, for your light has come! And the glory of the Lord is risen upon you. Isaiah 60:1

Zomi Christian Fellowship, Delhi : 21.06.2026 Theme of the year: "Revive us again" - Psalm 85:6

A good Christian father

A good Christian father models Christ-like love, patience, and integrity in the home. He actively disciplines his children by integrating faith into daily life, provides emotional and spiritual security, and leads his family with grace, humility, and active, lifelong engagement.

Living out the call of a Christian father involves several foundational principles:

1. Spiritual Leadership and Discipleship : A godly father goes beyond just taking his family to church; he weaves his faith into everyday conversations and "teachable moments".

Modeling behavior: He embodies virtues like love, patience, and self-control, showing his children what a follower of Jesus looks like in practice.

Prayer: He prays consistently both for and with his children, grounding the family in their identity in Christ.

2. Emotional Presence and Nurturing : Fatherhood requires active emotional involvement, vulnerability, and intentional time.

Being present: He shows up for both the big milestones and the quiet everyday moments.

Active listening: He seeks to understand his children's hearts and validate their feelings, rather than just reacting to their behavior.

3. Grace-Filled Discipline : Discipline is viewed as a loving tool for correction, instruction, and discipleship rather than an outlet for anger or frustration.

Avoiding harshness: He heeds the biblical warning in Colossians 3:21 to not provoke children to wrath, preventing discouragement.

Encouragement: He encourages his children to grow into the people God designed them to be, rather than pushing them to live out the father's unmet ambitions.

4. Demonstrating Sacrificial Love : Mirroring Christ's love for the church, a good Christian father prioritizes his family's well-being over his own convenience.

Honoring his spouse: He treats his wife with unwavering love and respect, which provides a profound sense of security for the children.

Humility: Because no earthly father is perfect, he is quick to admit his mistakes, apologize, and model the importance of grace and forgiveness. (By Julie)

A Good Father

My dad wasn't perfect, no parent is, but he was a good father. He was already forty-seven when I was born, but I was lucky to have him until he was ninety-eight. He's been gone for a long time, but I still reminisce fondly about him when Father's Day approaches. My dad was nurturing, supportive, and consistently present. I never wondered if he loved me because he told me every chance he got. Remembering my dad prompted me to think about the qualities that make a man a good father. With the help of input from Facebook friends, this is a list of ten qualities a good father possesses. It's not an exhaustive list, but it's a starting place.

1. He shows up : A good father is there for the big things like birthdays and graduations, but he also shows up for the science fair and spelling bees. It seems like a low bar to set, but being present is highly underrated. Be fully present without looking at your phone or other devices. Show up and focus on your kids.

2. He sets a good example : Children are always watching and learning. A good father will be honest and have a good character. Several people in my informal survey mentioned the importance of integrity. A good dad should strive to have admirable characteristics that their children will want to emulate.

The Baby Boomers I talked to felt like modeling a strong work ethic was essential.

Today's Verse: 1 Timothy 5:8 A Good Father disciplines their children.

Proverbs 13:24 A Good Father spends time with their children, and it's not empty time.

Deuteronomy 6: 6-9 A Good Father is compassionate toward their children.

Walking with God

"With long life I will satisfy him and show him my salvation." - Psalm 91:16 God's promise is a testament to His unwavering commitment to you. He assures you not just of a long life, but one filled with the richness of His presence and the assurance of His eternal salvation. Each day you are given is an opportunity to witness His love and grace. Embrace these moments as gifts, knowing that He walks beside you with plans for your joy and fulfillment.

When challenges arise and pathways seem unclear, remember that His promise of a long and satisfying life remains. Every trial is an opportunity to lean into His strength and discover more of His incredible provision. Trust that He uses each situation to mold you and prepare you for an eternity spent in His glorious presence.

Let this promise inspire you to live boldly and with purpose. Your life is a canvas on which God is painting His story of salvation, love, and grace. Step forward with confidence, assured that He is guiding you toward a future filled with His light and promise.

Contd from Page 1- People in my generation mostly had dads who grew up during the Depression, so they believed in working hard. My younger friends are more impressed with a man who can find a good work-family life balance and be a parenting partner to their significant other.

3. He treats the mother of his children with respect : Even if there has been a difficult divorce, a good father will treat the mother of his children with respect. A good father sets the tone for how the children view and treat their mother. Through words and behavior, a good father will always show respect and kindness towards the mother of his children.

Friends of my generation were more likely to think the partner should be treated "like a queen," whereas my younger friends favored an egalitarian relationship.

4. He takes joy in his kids : The sound of laughter and play is one of the happiest sounds in a home. A good father will take joy in being with his kids, whether talking, playing, or just hanging out together.

5. He disciplines fairly : The word "discipline" actually means "instruction and training" and is derived from the Latin root word discere – "to learn." In speaking with one of my friends, he mentioned respect as an essential part of discipline. Because he respected his parents, he chose good behavior. Forming a close relationship that involves two-way trust and respect is the foundation for effective discipline.

6. He listens : Fathers love to share stories of their glory days and give advice. That's OK sometimes, but a good dad also needs to listen. Children should feel they can talk to their dad about any problem, and it will be met with understanding.

Achieving that level of trust begins early with good communication. Ask your child questions to know them on a deeper level. Here are some suggestions for questions to get started.

7. He verbally expresses love and pride : Tell your kids you love them. Tell your kids you're proud of them. They need to hear those words! My dad was generous with his words, never missing a chance to tell me he loved me, and I cherish those memories.

If saying it is too difficult, write notes for their lunchbox or write words of love, praise, and encouragement in a letter. Just don't leave any words of love go unsaid. Hearing expressions of love has a significant impact on a child's development!

8. He spends the most precious asset: time : Where a person invests their time shows their priorities in life. Unfortunately, the intense period of a person's career is often at the same time as the intense period of parenting. It's essential to provide a good living to provide the basic needs for your children, but it's also important to invest your time in their life. This is correlated with #1, showing up for the important things, and yes, nightly family dinners and tuck-in times are amongst the critical events in a child's life.

I think of time like grains of sand on the beach. Each grain might be small, but together, they form a beach. Each minute you spend with your kids is like adding a grain of sand to the beach that is their life. Build a solid beach that won't be washed away easily.

9. He is protective : Good parents want the best for their kids. It's sometimes walking a narrow line to find the balance between allowing a child to be as independent as possible while also protecting them if necessary. As one of my friends said, he would gladly fight a bear to protect his daughters. Yet, he's raised such strong, smart kids that he rarely has needed to intervene on their behalf. However, I bet his kids know that he would make any sacrifice for them, and that knowledge gives a person an inner armor of security.

10. He is supportive : A good father supports and encourages his children. This is easy if your kids follow the path you hope they choose. The real test is if they choose a lifestyle or career you don't like or don't understand.

Children should not be seen as a chance to live out our unfulfilled dreams vicariously. They are individuals with their own goals and plans. If you dreamed of your child being a quarterback in the NFL, but they prefer painting, it's your job to go to their art shows with a smile on your face.

As the saying goes, there is no way to be a perfect parent, but there are hundreds of ways to be a good one. With the input of Facebook friends (a big thanks to them), I came up with these ten qualities, which I think are fairly universal. If you've noticed, none of these cost a penny. I also never mentioned genetics because sometimes the best fathers have no genetic connection to their children. Being a good father costs time, energy, and investment of your heart and mind, but I promise the return on your investment will be abundant. Wishing you a Father's Day filled with love!
